Frogmore Hours and Pricing

Frogmore Plantation is more than a historical landmark. It's a living history museum that shines a light on the past. In fact, Rand McNally named Frogmore Cotton Plantation & Gins a "Must See Site" in the South. Owners Buddy and Lynette Tanner are passionate about sharing their plantation with visitors through tours, education, and a candid discussion about the enslaved people whose labor allowed the plantation to flourish. With 19 preserved antebellum buildings, a rare steam-powered cotton gin, today's state-of-the-art ginning equipment, and fields of cotton to pick from mid-July to April, you'll walk away with a deeper understanding of antebellum plantation life and the legacy of slavery, the Civil War, sharecropping, and modern-day agriculture on this working cotton farm.

With a variety of individual and group tour options, you can tailor your visit to your interests. Here is some additional information to help plan your visit.
